

Lucy in Space Contest

I have thought for a lengthy and difficult time trying to come up with a design deserving of presenting the process of both evolution on Earth and the evolution of our solar system. Staring off during a class, the idea popped into my head, since both humans and the Earth have evolved in similar ways, they can be seen to be running in parallel. It is almost as if the top half of a house was precisely the same flipped underground, mirroring it, yet different. So, I drew the evolution of primates to modern-day humans along with the Earth evolving from floating rocks into a place habitable for humans and creatures to live on. Lucy is represented in the line of our ancestors. And, at the center of it all, the center of our solar system, the sun. It has been there all along, glowing brightly, giving light, and life even from the start of the universe. Adding more craggy edges around the masterpiece, the Trojan Asteroids in our solar system are represented. Asteroids help represent the rest of the universe. Teaching us about the past, and helping us to understand the origins of everything.
